INTRODUCTION

The Howard University Center for Disability and Socioeconomic Policy Studies (CDSPS) is funded by NIDRR, the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research, and the Rehabilitation Services Administration of the United States Department of Education. CDSPS' three foci are research, training, and dissemination. This Sourcebook is a component of the dissemination focus.

The purpose of this Sourcebook is to provide information about multicultural access to Federal projects, programs, grants, research and career enhancement opportunities for individuals, institutions, and agencies.

The Sourcebook is divided into three sections:

Section I contains a description of the Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services projects and programs, (including the Office of Special Education Programs, Rehabilitation Services Administration, and the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research).

Section II highlights profiles of minority programs in various Federal agencies. This section also contains profiles of various human resource, development, minority women's and persons' with disabilities programs available through the National Science Foundation for development, human resources, minority women and persons with disabilities.

Section III contains information on multicultural diversity resources.

This section also contains profiles of various programs for professional development, human resources and minority women and individuals with disabilities offered through the National Science Foundation.

SECTION I

DESCRIPTION OF THE OFFICE OF SPECIAL EDUCATION AND REHABILITATIVE SERVICES PROJECTS AND PROGRAMS

The three major objectives of the Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services (OSERS) and of the Secretary of the United States Department of Education, are to (1) support programs that assist in educating children, (2) provide for rehabilitation of youth and adults with disabilities, and (3) support research to improve the lives of individuals with disabilities. OSERS impacts on special education, rehabilitation services and research by directing, coordinating and recommending policy. OSERS administers programs designed to facilitate the development and independence of persons with disabilities. It does this through supporting opportunities for independent living and delivery of vocational rehabilitation services. Additionally, OSERS administers funds for rehabilitation and special education research, demonstration projects, and dissemination of information about services, laws, and programs affecting individuals with disabilities.

The programs administered by OSERS include the Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP), the Rehabilitation Services Administration (RSA), and the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research (NIDRR). Each of OSERS' three program areas serves a specialized function which supports the OSERS objectives.

Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP)

OSEP administers programs ensuring free appropriate public education for children, youth, and adults with disabilities. It monitors programs to improve and expand services to special populations, administers grants to state education agencies to support state and local services to individuals with disabilities (from preschool through adult levels) and supports integrated programs for persons with severely disabling conditions. OSEP also administers personnel preparation programs which train educators, and conducts research to improve methods of instructing or serving special education populations.

OSEP's other areas of responsibilities include developing and disseminating information about model post secondary programs for individuals with disabilities and funding projects to increase the high quality of instructional media, materials and technology available to children and youth with disabilities.

There are nineteen (19) specific grant programs administered under OSEP. The majority of the grant programs accept proposals from Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) and other culturally diverse institutions or agencies. The following is a brief description of each of the 19 programs, including information on who may apply and a contact telephone number.

REHABILITATION SERVICES ADMINISTRATION PROGRAMS

Rehabilitation Services Administration (RSA)

RSA allocates grants to state vocational rehabilitation agencies that provide counseling, medical, job training, psychological and other services to help individuals with physical or mental disabilities gain employment. A priority of RSA is to provide services to persons who are severely disabled, through funding of programs to train rehabilitation professionals, enrich the lives of persons with disabilities, increase employment opportunities, or support independent living efforts. One of RSA's programs is the Client Assistance Program, which assists persons with disabilities in receiving available benefits. RSA supports independent living by administering federal grants which may be combined with state funds to assist state vocational rehabilitation agencies in providing services such as counseling, housing, attendant care, transportation, interpreters, readers, job placement and recreation. RSA awards are also made to assist and encourage supported employment programs for persons with severe disabilities who are otherwise considered unemployable.

In addition, RSA grants also support rehabilitation services to individuals with disabilities including, migratory and seasonal farm workers with disabilities, Native Americans, and individuals with severe disabilities who are in transition from schools or institutions into the community.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON DISABILITY AND REHABILITATION RESEARCH PROGRAMS

National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research (NIDRR)

This division of OSERS provides leadership and support for a comprehensive coordinated national and international rehabilitation research program. NIDRR supports international exchange of rehabilitation experts and information, research, and demonstration projects. Rehabilitation Research and Training Centers supported by NIDRR concentrate on specific topics related to improving rehabilitation for individuals with disabilities. The Centers also conduct some training to increase the supply of rehabilitation professionals. NIDRR Rehabilitation Engineering Research Centers address needs such as assistive technology to support mobility, prosthetics, modification of work environment, and transportation methods.

Other programs supported by NIDRR include:

-Research, Training, and Career Development Program:
Provides advanced training for technical and scientific research.

-Mary E. Switzer Fellowship Program:
Provides fellowships to experienced rehabilitation professionals

-Research and Demonstration Grants Program:
Provides supports for testing of new rehabilitation concepts, development of unique rehabilitation training curricula, and demonstration of promising research.

NIDRR has two major funding authorities: 84:244 and 84:133.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT MINORITY PROGRAMS

Description of National Science Foundation Programs

The National Science Foundation (NSF) is an independent agency of the Federal Government established in 1950 to promote and advance scientific and engineering progress in the United States. The foundation does this primarily by sponsoring scientific and engineering research and education. NSF does not itself conduct research.

The Foundation considers the preparation and advancement of underrepresented minorities in science and engineering at all educational levels to be of prime importance to the Nation. Consequently, the Foundation has redesigned and enhanced its initiatives aimed at developing minority students and strengthening the capacity of institutions and organizations that serve large numbers of these students at all educational levels.

Because women are underrepresented in all science and engineering disciplines, the Division for Human Resource Development supports targeted interventions that are specifically directed at increasing the number of women as full participants in the mainstream of the Nation's scientific and technological expertise.

NSF also encourages persons with disabilities to participate fully in NSF-supported projects. In addition to the Facilitation Awards for Persons with Disabilities program, the Foundation promotes full inclusion of persons with disabilities in academic studies leading to careers in science and engineering.

The programs sponsored by NSF are described on the following pages.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT MINORITY PROGRAM

PROGRAM 1.

Career Access Opportunities (CAO) in Science and Technology. This serves as an umbrella program for encouraging proposals that enhance pre-college science, engineering, and mathematics education for minorities. The program offers the following three components:

- (a) Comprehensive Regional Centers for Minorities (CRCMs);
- (b) Summer Science Camps (SSC); and,
- (c) Partnerships for Minority Student Achievement (PMSA).

WHO MAY APPLY

CRCM: Colleges, universities, school districts, and other organizations.

SSC: School districts, museums, colleges, and universities, and nonprofit youth-centered and/or community based organizations.

PMSA: City/County school systems.

PROGRAM 3.

Partnerships for Minority Student Achievement (PMSA). This program supports comprehensive pre-college education reform programs targeted at school systems with significant minority student populations.

WHO MAY APPLY

City/County school systems, that are the units of change, are expected to link with institutions of higher education, community based and other educational organizations.

PROGRAM 5.

Alliances for Minority Participation (AMP). The AMP program supports the establishment of comprehensive approaches to increase the quantity and quality of education of underrepresented minorities successfully completing science and engineering baccalaureate degrees, and the number who go on to graduate study in these fields.

WHO MAY APPLY

Student enrichment, academic enrichment, curricula improvement, and enhancement of institutions with significant minority science and engineering enrollment.

PROGRAM 6.

Research Career for Minority Scholars (RCMS). The RCMS program is also designed to retain a significant number of underrepresented minority students in the science and engineering fields. The program provides support to help universities and colleges implement enrichment programs in science and engineering and includes stipends to qualified minority science and engineering students so that they can pursue career paths in those fields.

WHO MAY APPLY

Academic institutions and non-profit organizations

PROGRAM 9.

Minority Research Centers of Excellence (MRCE). One of the major goals of the MRCE program is to increase the numbers of minorities in science and engineering by making substantial resources available to upgrade the capabilities of the strongest and most research productive minority institutions.

WHO MAY APPLY

Academic institutions whose enrollments are comprised of 50% or more of minority individuals that are under-represented; and have graduate programs in NSF-supported fields of science or baccalaureate programs in engineering.

PROGRAM 10.

Research Opportunities for Minority Students and College Faculty. Utilizing existing NSF supplemental programs, principal investigators with NSF awards may include these persons in their projects as research assistants. Most awards are for summer support, but arrangements may sometimes be made for the academic year.

WHO MAY APPLY

Underrepresented minorities who are citizens or nationals of the United States. High school or undergraduate level. Faculty should be employed in U.S. academic institutions, working in any NSF-supported field, and not have the resources for the research at their own institutions.
